Course Description

This course surveys the major developments in Western Art History from the Renaissance to the Present. In addition to familiarizing students with the primary historical developments in the visual arts during this period, the course also addresses some of the most significant conceptual questions that the use of images during this span of time confronts: How are we to understand the rise of illusionistic painting or optical naturalism in the 14th and 15th centuries, and the abandonment of such picture making in avant garde and abstract work of the 19th and 20th centuries? What effect did the appearance of new media, such as photography and film, have on the visual arts more broadly? What role have images played during this period in mobilizing social energies? How do they relate to theoretical or scientific knowledge? While dedicating much attention to the history of images itself, the course also situates that history in relation to broader developments in social, intellectual, and cultural history.

Course Goals

While the course will focus on ensuring mastery of the historical materials it surveys, it will also place a premium on the acquisition of certain skills. Above all, the course will seek to instruct students in the fundamentals of visual analysis (how do we talk significantly about images?), as well as hone their skills in historical and critical reading.

Required Text

There is no single required text. The instructor will place excerpts from many books, as well as scans of primary source documents and essays, online on reserve. Among the texts on which the course will draw, and that students are encouraged (though not required) to purchase, are:
Fred Kleiner, Christin Mamiya, and Richard Tansey, Gardner’s Art through the Ages
Joshua C. Taylor, Learning to Look
Michael Baxandall, Painting and Experience in Fifteenth-Century Italy
Herschell Chipp, Theories of Modern Art
Hal Foster, Rosalind Krauss, Yve-Alain Bois, Benjamin Buchloh, Art since 1900
