Course Overview

This course offers a broad and structured introduction to Japanese society and culture in transnational and comparative perspective.

The course will start with studying Japanese culture-specific time and space composition. For example, students will get familiar with Japanese year and era-naming system, Japanese festivals, customs and habits. After gaining sufficient social and culture context for further study, students will explore different aspects of “modern Japan” by using various methods and approaches and form a comprehensive understanding towards Japanese society and culture from various aspects, such as customs, values, traditions, and culture.

The course is to anyone with interest in modern Japanese society and culture without prerequisite. No Japan-specific knowledge is required, but an interest in social science concepts and methods will be preferable. Both lecture and discussion formats will be utilized throughout the course.

Course Goals

By the end of the semester, students will have sufficient knowledge in understanding Japanese major social and culture history and trend. Student will acquire sufficient context, tools, and confidence in understanding and studying Japanese-culture related topics they are not familiar with.
