Term	June 27, 2022 - July 22, 2022	Credits	4 units
Course Delivery	The class will be delivered in the format of online. Other than recorded lecture videos, the instructor will arrange 2-6 hours' real-time interactions with students per week (via discussion forum, zoom meeting, and WeChat). The workload students are expected to complete to properly pass this course is about 15-20 hours per week.
Required Texts (with ISBN)	William J. Duiker and Jackson J. Spielvogel, World History, Volume II: Since 1500 9th Edition ISBN: 1337401064 Note: it is perfectly fine to use an older addition of this text (older additions may have different page numbers, but will also be less expensive); additional readings will come from the internet or will be made available as a PDF.
Prerequisite	N/A

Course Overview

This course explores the development of the modern world since 1500, a time span of over 500 years. Students will encounter major world events, revolutions, and people and ideas from the east and the west. We will explore, compare, and contrast religious, political, economic, social, and cultural shifts, as well as how ideologies such as nationalism, liberalism, communism, and fascism have shaped our modern world.

Online Teaching Arrangements

Each day will usually have two pre-recorded lectures lasting approximately 50 minutes (simulating the in-class experience where we have a ten-minute break between lectures). Some days will only have one lecture as the topic is large and the lecture will go longer than usual. In conjunction with the class TA, students will meet with the instructor approximately 1 hour each week for a Zoom meeting. All slides will be available both as PowerPoint and as smaller PDFs.

Note: I strive to get back to students via email very quickly! However, due to time zone differences, you may not receive a response right away. If at any point in the class you have a question about lecture, homework, or the exams, please email me or send me a message on WeChat. I love the material very much and am happy to explain things or help out if you are feeling behind.

Course Goals

The course has three main purposes. The first is to present students with information about and interpretations of modern world history since approximately 1500. The course will emphasize the diversity of those experiences even as it seeks to discover common themes. The second purpose is to introduce students to (or deepen their familiarity with) the discipline of history. By reading works of historical scholarship as well as original historical documents, students will see for themselves how historians ply their craft—what kinds of evidence they use and how they interpret that evidence to illuminate the past. The third purpose of the course, closely related to the second, is to challenge students to think critically about the development of the modern world. Students will learn how to identify and critique scholarly arguments in the work of professional historians, and how to construct historical arguments of their own. This course will routinely explore sensitive and controversial topics. Your teaching assistant and I will not guide you to one single “right” answer—for there is no such thing. Instead, we will help you to develop your critical thinking skills through historical investigation. Although names, dates, and events are important, the learning emphasis will be on applying those methods in the construction of historical arguments using both primary and secondary sources.
